'Final battles vs Abus at hand'

By Alvin Paga

THE MILITARY YESTERDAY BLAMED ITSELF for "final battles" with the Abu Sayyaf and placed its troops on nationwide alert to thwart revenge attacks following the death of the senior group's leader Khadaffy Janjalani.

Shortly before the government confirmed on Saturday the death of the Abu Sayyaf chief (Khadaffy), Janjalani's followers unleashed a military campaign in Jolo, killing one soldier and wounding several others.

Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Hermenegildo Esguerra Jr. said his troops "can feel that the final battles are on hand."

"The end of the Abu Sayyaf is near," he told the Inquirer. "The soldiers are eager to finish it... They want to be part of the final battles. They want to take advantage of the fact that the group is leaderless."

Esguerra said succeeding military operations against the Abu Sayyaf—which he estimated to number a little more than 300 men—would be "intensive and fast in tempo."

"We'll give them no quarter. We have to hit all the remaining leaders while they're in a crisis," Esguerra separately told The Associated Press.

Janjalani's family refused to accept his death and insisted he was still alive as far as they were concerned, despite a DNA test carried out by US authorities that confirmed that the body unearthed in the jungles of Jolo was that of the group's most wanted man. (See related story on Page A16.)

AFP spokesperson Col. Francisco Bascara said the military had raised its alert status to its highest level of "red." He Mindanao, the alert was an "extreme critical level," meaning more terror attacks were possible, he said.

"We are tracking activities for retaliatory attacks, like bombings and attacks on soldiers. We are ready to preempt probable attacks," Bascara said.

LAST INTERVIEW

Janjalani: Prophet gave order to kidnap

By Octavio A. Dinampo

HISTORY'S NOTE: WITH THE confirmed death of Abu Sayyaf leader Khadaffy A. Janjalani, who is believed to be his last extended interview, conducted by Octavio A. Dinampo, a professor of Mindanao State University (MSU)-Sulu, on Feb. 27, 2006, concludes in the hundreds of hours, in being "interviewed" as it were. It is part of some field research undertaken by the South-South Network (SSN) for Human Rights and Group Impunity in preparation for a coming comprehensive book on Philippine armed groups. It was made available to the Inquirer by SSN Regional Field Point for Asia and southeast Asian researcher Solomon M. Santos Jr. It provides a broader view of the Abu Sayyaf, an insight into its origins, its nature, its thinking, its goals (struggle), and even its prospects, relevant even after the recent deaths of Janjalani and other Abu Sayyaf leaders. The interview was conducted solely in Tagalog and translated into English by Dinampo himself, then slightly edited by Santos but was unexpurgated.

Lone voice in jungle attracted Marines

IT WAS NOT A GLOBAL positioning device (GPS) or some other sophisticated monitoring equipment that finally ended the run of Khadaffy Janjalani.

Janjalani's own voice in the early hours of Sept. 4, 2006, as he sang and prayed before the Marines led to the discovery of his hiding place in the jungles of Jolo.

But it was the leader of a young movement to immediately attack that delivered the deadly blow, ending the long and costly hunt for the mysterious Abu Sayyaf chieftain.

At last, there was the voice that the side of the fighters—given by the soldiers who had been deployed in Jolo to hunt down the Abu Sayyaf and their Jemaah Islamiyah allies.

Hillary makes US presidential race most exciting in history

PROGRESSIVE-SEN. HILLARY Clinton has plunged into the 2008 US presidential race as immediate favorite to win her party's nomination, but her political stage career Democratic rivals like Barack Obama and John Edwards have a chance to steal it from her.

Her long-awaited entry into the race opened up what promises to be one of the most exciting and groundbreaking political contests in US history—putting Clinton, determined to become the first American woman president, against Obama, who aims to be the first African-American to the White House.

"You in And I'm in to win," Clinton said in a video announcement on her website on Saturday.

Four days earlier, Senator Obama from Illinois signaled his own plans to fight for the nomination.

Iloilo raid shows GMA admin fascistic

By Arsenio Dela Cruz

(Dorothea party)

THE ASSAULT BY THE ADMINISTRATION's storm troops on the Iloilo provincial capital on Wednesday to evict Iloilo First Lady Med Trapani is shrouded the nation with a brutal show of force not seen since the execution of the assassination of President Manuel Arroyo when she declared a state of national emergency in February 2006.

ANALYSIS

The assault triggered a wave of national resistance down to the grass roots, claimed by the administration as the first step in its election strategy.

It would be a tragedy if the assault on the Iloilo province were to be confined to Iloilo.

The regime should beware of the fallout. It has provoked susprise across the country, and handed the opposition a powerful galvanizing force against the administration ahead of the midterm elections.

The Iloilo raid by the military and the national police is a message that the administration is abusive, dangerous and cannot be trusted with power in the machine of the state's police powers and with monitoring, directing their elections in May.

The Mendiola massacre.
Ten decades after 12 protesting farmers were gunned down near the gates of Malacañang, their friends and loved ones gathered in their memory and proclaimed their love in the struggle for genuine land reform.

They were farmers, all of them, said Purita Pardo, 42, the widow of Rufino Pardo, one of those who were killed on Jan. 22, 1987, when some 1,000 farmers led by a thousand protesters who had protested in Mendiola.

Yesterday, the joined 500 members of Kilangam, 22 and following the 12th anniversary of the Mendiola massacre.

"I pray that one day justice will be served and my husband will finally be at peace," he said.

The group carried a black granite marker measuring 50 by 100 centimeters honoring the 12 farmers who were slain during the 12th anniversary of the Mendiola massacre.

On the preceding day, thousands of people gathered in the streets in Quezon City to mark the anniversary of the Mendiola massacre.

The 12 names were on the marker along with the words, "Kilangam, a living testament to the struggle for genuine land reform."

"We are here to remember the sacrifice of our farmers and to offer in the struggle for genuine land reform," said Danilo Razon, secretary general of Kilangam.

"Twenty long years have already passed but justice has not been served. The outcome who ordered the government forces to fire at us remained only here on this ground," Razon said in a statement.

Lascuna settles for 14th place tie

MANILA—YOUNG LASCUNA COOLED OFF in the final round and settled for a three-over-par 75 that left him in a tie for 14th place at the end of the Bahamas Open on Sunday.

After ending seven events earlier in the tournament for a 67, Lascuna couldn't get one in the last 18 holes while taking three bogies in a 36-37 card that left him with a 7-under total of 282.

The well-built, formeraddy from Apollo Club in Cebu, who had earlier rounds of 70, 69, 71, had produced his best finish among the 128 Filipino who started the halfway-out of the opening leg of the 2007 Asian Tour at the Raffles Club.

Meanwhile, Percy talked with a 56 to catch Antonio Montano (77) in 3-under 280, while former Philippine finished among the top 10 at 284 after a 72.

Malaysia's Arif Rahman (80) opened the championship with a final round 70 that a 75-over 289 total. It was his first win on the Asian Tour.

Meanwhile, former U.S. Open champion, former United States Tour regular, sat out the 2007 tour with a 65 for 271 while Englishman Simon Jones (84) took third at 274 after a 71.

Lascuna, who became the fourth Filipino regular on the Asian Tour after Pinckney Mitchell, Jack Pomeroy and Angelo Que when he earned the Asia-Pacific tour's first membership (Pinarol) picked up 21,700.

Lascuna was $2,400, Percy and Montano at $1,800 each and Dela Cruz at $1,100.

The tour resumed with the $2 million Cebu Open (Asian Tour) on Sunday, a 72-hole event by the European Tour, at the Raffles Club in Cebu.

It will be followed the next week by the $100,000 Philippine Open at Feb. 1-4 at Nick's Club.

PLDT last backed the deployment of Next Generation Network (NGN) facilities in Cebu in time for the ASEAN Summit. These state-of-the-art high-speed telecommunications facilities provide landline telephones with broadband capabilities — voice, video and high-speed data.

At the Cebu International Convention Center (CICC), delegates and foreign media practitioners had access not only to telephone and Internet facilities, but also to high-quality international broadcast links to Asia, Europe and Australia through the facilities of Mabuhay Satellite.

Delegates and newsmen in SMART EIR hotlines in the different venues had quick, easy broadband access to the Internet using their laptops. SMART also backed up its 3G services to ensure always-on broadband connection even while on the go.

A SMART Bro on Mobile (SMART BroM) — a mobile Internet cafe in a van — was also deployed for the use of the media.

"We are honored to have had the chance to do our share in hosting the 12th ASEAN Summit in Cebu," said PLDT and SMART president and CEO Napoleon L. Nazareno. "The entire PLDT Group pledged efforts to provide the Summit the required telecommunications support using our full range of products and services."

With the theme "One Caring and Sharing Community," the 12th ASEAN Summit has successfully steered ASEAN closer to realizing its vision of an ASEAN Community by 2025.

Politicking still worries businessmen

By Daniel S. Lucas

BUSINESSMEN REMAIN WORRIED over the negative influence that politics may have on the economy despite the government's optimistic prediction that it will be a year of boom.

At the same time, however, business leaders like DBRC president Ramon B. del Rosario Jr. maintain that the business community should not spend too much time worrying about the government's political maneuvering.

"There always seems to be looking good, much as we have seen, with the economy posting sustained growth and the financial markets trading with every bullish tone, there is a tendency for people to look into issues of governance and accountability for fear of undermining the economy and derailing the country's and financial markets' growth momentum," he said.

Del Rosario is one of the economists in a forum on the country's 2007 prospects hosted by the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (Fcap) in Manila City last Friday.

"The development of businesses, in particular, is almost to be very reluctant to become politically involved in demanding political accountability and good governance, particularly when business is doing well," he added.

However, he stressed that the DBRC takes a longer-term view in the "close interrelationship" between good governance and political accountability with the country's sustained economic progress.

Wants to raise $1.3B for infra projects

By Denis C. Duran

THE GOVERNMENT PLANS TO SELL AN EXCLUSIVE batch of retail treasury bonds (RTBs) to overseas Filipino workers within the year and use the proceeds to shore up its infrastructure spending.

In an infrastructure forum held by First Abnco Investment Corp. and the University of Asia & the Pacific on Friday, Bangkok-based Philippine Deposit Guaranty (PDG) Governor Dios Goringa said the government was now looking for the introduction of the proposed RTB issuance targeting OFWs and their families.

"It's being discussed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the context of its revenue-raising and financing," Goringa said.

"It can be considered to provide a loan or even depending on the demand for OFWs," he said.

Stock index seen testing 3,100 mark

OTHER MARKETS HAVE OFTEN HELPED a close eye on the Bangkok Stock Exchange this week as the policy-making Monetary Board meets on Thursday to discuss and the direction of local interest rates.

Based on its 30-member index published by the Capital Markets, all indicators point toward the monetary authority keeping its overnight rate steady.

"It appears that the BSE will stay put and as rates remain unchanged, the reaction," the central bank said.

The prevailing interest rate is expected to remain steady at 4 percent as of late last week, which has been partly credited to the strong rally of stock prices in recent weeks.

Last Friday, the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE) closed at a 10-year high of 3,090.18, its highest since the crash of 2000-01, representing a 1.3 percent weekly rise.

Indices were lower throughout the week with average of P1.7 billion trading hands daily, representing a 45 percent jump from previous weeks' average of only P1.5 billion.

All Capital said that although there is a lot of talk about a new economic recovery, some potential inflationary pressures may play the hand of the central bank for now.

French bank sees continued peso rally

By Dore C. Dunbar

PERFECT BANKING: LIGHT AND POUNDS is bullish on the peso given the country's under economic fundamentals, projecting the local currency to rally further toward the 40 level against the dollar by the second half of 2006, according to information furnished by First Swiss Investment Corp. and the Chartered Bank of London on Friday, BNP Paribas.

about economic and level of credit to watch for the bank's Andre Fournier and they were expected to "stand."

The Hong Kong-based economist had also forecast growth in foreign direct investment would grow this year and 5.5 percent next year while inflation would remain steady at 4.5 percent this year and 5.5 percent in 2006.

He said the peso would continue to appreciate against the dollar as foreign inflows were improving alongside the country's external trade balance.

BNP Paribas also saw the peso leveling within the 40 level within the first half of this year then breaking into the 47 level after the May election. The local currency was projected to be 47.50 by the third quarter and further rise to 47 in the dollar by the last quarter of the year.

By the last quarter of 2006, Fournier projected the peso would gain further against the dollar to 50-55 in the first quarter, 45 in the second quarter, 40 in the third quarter and 35 in the fourth quarter.

"The external balance will support it. Inflation remains low. GDP growth is going to be healthy and the foreign exchange rate is substantial improvement in local position will contribute to it in some way," Fournier said.

Mind-reading phones, 3D Internet shopping

IBM gives a peek of what to expect in next 5 years

By Alvin L. Ho

IBM HAS A DARING VISION of the future of mobile devices. In the next five years, the company expects to see a proliferation of mobile devices, from smartphones to PDAs, that will be able to do everything a desktop PC can do. IBM is betting that these devices will be the main way people will interact with the Internet in the future.

about their users' information and performance as they come, with and without, "IBM said. "Personal" technology is currently used to track shopping, which makes it possible to learn and identify a user as soon as he logs on to a network. Five years from now, IBM said, mobile devices will be better able to learn about and adapt to their users' preferences and needs. "Personal" technology should also be more mainstream by 2011, allowing millions of people with chronic health problems such as diabetes, heart disease, kidney or respiratory problems to have their conditions automatically monitored remotely. "Service users and healthcare providers will use a personal approach to ongoing, remote monitoring of patients, delivered through services in the home, more on the phone, as in devices and packaging," IBM said. "These advances will allow a few patients to better monitor their own health and help clinicians provide the ongoing personal care regardless of a patient's location." It added, "The biggest payoff, the next five years would also bring a new class of mobile devices, such as real-time speech translation between languages. IBM's speech technology currently allows PDA users to learn key words from Japanese, as well as let mobile users translate Chinese and Arabic news headlines from the Web to English, and document communications with patients to Spanish. Such real-time translation technology and services, IBM said, would be built into mobile phones, handheld devices and cars. The Internet would also likely get a boost in the next five years, IBM said. By then, the Internet would probably be 3D, allowing users to walk through or participate in location-based events when they shop online. "The 3D Internet will enable new kinds of education, remote medicine and consumer experiences, transforming how we interact with our friends, family, doctors, teachers, friends, clients and more," IBM said. Finally, as with what is already happening, IBM said, mobile devices will continue to become smaller and smaller, as they are becoming more powerful. "The next five years, our technology will be used to help education, effectively helping address the growing worldwide shortage of quality teachers. This education will also support advanced video modeling and improved video game systems.

Japan PlayStation 3 shipments hit 1M

By Rita T. Ochoa

TOKYO—SHIPMENTS IN JAPAN of the new PlayStation 3 video game machines reached 1 million Tuesday, Sony said, hitting the milestone just about two weeks behind schedule.

Sony had planned to ship 2 million PlayStation 3 machines around the end of last year. Last week, Tokyo-based Sony Corp. said it was shipping more of the machines to the United States in 2006. It projected shipping another million domestically during the same period, but speculation had been growing that P3 sales may be slowing in Japan.

to be strong in coming months because of the expected sales of new game software in the world, according to Sony's game unit.

Long Consumer Electronics' head of all activities, said in Tuesday's press release that a global shipment of 2 million machines within about two months after a machine launch is the fastest pace for any game console ever put out by the company.

The PS3, which comes with a new 60GB hard drive, competes against PlayStation 2 during the Christmas shopping season.

Microsoft's Xbox, despite a chief executive's warning that the company was struggling in Japan with its Xbox 360 console, also reported strong sales in the country.

Committed investments in '06 hit P274B

DTI says registered projects are expected to create 135,069 jobs

By Ronald R. Delaño

WITH 382 ADDITIONS OF 58,566 positions of Trade and Industry reported that a total of P274 billion in investments were committed last year, an increase of about 16.5 percent from the P231 billion registered in 2005.

Trade Secretary Peter B. Francisco said the increase proved in 2006 was 8 percent higher than the target of P154 billion for the year.

The goal was based on the government's target of growing the economy by 10 percent a year.

Once operational, "the 384 projects registered with the Board of Investments and the Philippine Economic Zone Authority are expected to create a total of 135,069 jobs," Francisco said. "Job generation in 2006 grew by 14.3 percent from the 118,147 jobs generated in 2005."

The surge in investments, Francisco added, "is a reflection of the investors' confidence, brought about by the improved foreign policies of the country and the enhanced business environment."

The BOI registered 231 projects worth P159 billion—15 percent higher than the P142 billion registered in 2005.

Some of the largest projects filed with the BOI last year were CDO House (US$1.94-billion), Con-Ed power plant, Inland Communications (P2.2-billion 3G cellular phone system), as well as Globe Telecom's P1.5-billion project.

Price registered 402 projects worth P64 billion in investments—24 percent higher than the previous year's P51 billion.

In 2006, the biggest Price-listed numbers were mostly those related to electronics and semiconductor. But there were also Upland Homes Corp.'s P1.4-billion project of affordable housing; HPH's 2 billion business process-outsourcing venture; Lepanto Consolidated Mining's P5.27-billion copper project; and San Carlos Technology's P1.23-billion data center.

With such performance this year, Francisco said DTI was raising the investment target to 22 percent a year from the original 10 percent that was adopted two years ago.

Trade Undersecretary Elmer C. Sumando, who is also BOI managing head, said the DTI was optimistic that the 2006 performance would be sustained through 2007, due to the expected inflow of capital in the infrastructure, mining, information and communications technology, tourism and health, and wellness sectors.

Sumando noted the improved annual investment performance of infrastructure at 1,008 percent, real estate at 113 percent, agriculture at 541 percent, and information technology sectors at 78 percent.

His mid-year statistics brought in commitments worth P152 billion, or 55 percent of the 2006 goal, while foreign investments amounted for P53 billion.

BSP's hedging tools trimmed GIR in 2006

By Scott C. Delaño

THE CENTRAL BANK'S GROSS INTERNATIONAL RESERVE, now at an all-time high of $23 billion, could have been higher had the Bangkoang Pilipino reduced fees applying to currency hedging tools, according to Citigroup economists.

In a commentary dated Jan. 10, Citigroup economists Jan. Trinidad estimated that the GIR build-up would have exceeded $25 billion if the BSP had not taken out some of the US dollar it bought from the spot foreign currency market.

"Borrowed and 2006 was 'marked by strong BSP intervention, particularly in the second half, to ease... the rapid accumulation of the peso arising from currency and bill movements. This was followed by a sharp increase in US dollar purchases."

Trinidad refers to a central bank's hedging-up operations pumped into the economy by an increase in net foreign assets arising from intervention in the spot foreign exchange market and reserve accumulation.

Citing official data, the economist said the BSP had taken out pesos equivalent to $7.96 billion in the foreign exchange swap market as of December last year. The figure represented the BSP's net dollar (USD) and long (long) position in the forward and future of foreign currencies against the peso.

A forward contract is an agreement between two parties to buy or sell at a set price a pre-agreed amount of a currency, while a future contract is a contract to buy or sell a standardized quantity of commodity spot financial instrument at a specified price with delivery set in a specified time in the future.

The economist also said that the BSP's intervention and application of the timing mechanism that neutralizes currency effects remain rate differential, had estimated annual peso appreciation to 7.5 percent in 2006.

In real terms, Citigroup continues an estimate of the official exchange rate index at 1.7 percent as of November, compared with the target average for 2005-2006, and at a post-currency rate level.

"There was no material loss in the forward exchange rate, so don't expect any currency rate from the BSP similar to the currency rate improvement by the Bank of Thailand in the currency market. There will remain local currency appreciation," Trinidad said.

A government source prior to the 2006 operations said Citigroup analysis was correct because if the central bank were to allow the GIR to rise to the target of $25 billion, it might avoid the impact that it would like the peso to appreciate sharply. At a 100-level of $25 billion, the official said the peso would jump as much as 40 to 50 percent.

The GIR, a key indicator of an economy's ability to service its foreign exchange requirements, rose by $4.5 billion, or 24 percent, in 2006, over the end-2005 level of $19.45 billion.

Foreign reserves consist of the BSP's gross foreign currency holdings, gold reserves, foreign bank notes and special drawing rights from multilateral institutions like the International Monetary Fund.

Private sector scores gains at Asean meet

Philippine business leaders to lead biofuels, franchising committees

By Russell P. Domingo

WHILE THE POSTPONEMENT OF THE 12TH Asean (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Summit and its resumption may have proved to be a blessing for local businesses, especially those based in Cebu, the changed schedule was at first a setback for the private sector.

But the setback did not prevent Philippine firms displaying their leadership capabilities, not only to governments and cultural outsiders, but in business-related promotional work.

The Asian Business Advisory Council last half on Jan. 16 met with the Asean leaders, to whom the group was set to report and give their recommendations on how to realize the Asean Economic Community envisioned by 2015.

Last 30 minutes

If the summit had pushed through in December, the 30-member Asian BAC had at least as much to exchange ideas with the leaders even then.

But the new schedule from Jan. 18-19 gave the group only half an hour to meet with the heads of state and of government.

Each of the 18 Asean members has, above representatives to Asean BAC.

Big improvement

For the Philippines, they are Jose Comapos, Jr. (who chaired the group for one year until the 12th summit last year) Miguel Vento and Donald G. Day—all three are leading members of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

"Sharp increases in actually a big improvement from the 18 minutes the Asean BAC was given during the 11th summit held in Kuala Lumpur in December 2005," an Asean BAC staff member with the bureau.

"Half of those 18 minutes were actually spent for introductions," he says. "The report and recommendations, and other matters the business leaders wanted to raise with the leaders had to be squeezed in during the remaining five minutes."

Still, better than with the up-division members in the region provided during the summit, especially for Philippine business firms, which were given special roles in monitoring efforts to improve 10 dispute-resolution mechanisms that include Singapore—one of the most advanced in the world—and Myanmar—one of those trailing in the development.

Two committees

During consultations with the Asean leaders, two committees were formed to take efforts to assist that were important for the region, both of which were to be led by Filipinos.

THE Asean Summit ended with Philippine leaders chairing two more regional committees.

One was to be engaged in studying the large-scale use of alternative sources of energy like biofuels that were rather well so because from just a few years ago, particularly known as a challenge.

The second was to lead the group, which he saw as a continuation of the Philippine regional leadership in research-and-development as well—in the field of technology.

Promotion of biofuels had been one of the most significant issues discussed in Cebu during the summit.

Asean and its six rising partners—China, Japan, South Korea, India, and the United States—

Bosch, Tesda join hands to advance tech skills

By Dawn L. Lopez

ROBERT BOSCH INC., THE PHILIPPINE FLAGSHIP of Robert Bosch GmbH (Germany), and the Technical Education and Skills Development

Agency (TESDA) signed a memorandum of agreement that formally engages both organizations in providing advanced automotive technology courses for skilled Filipino mechanics and technicians.

The MOA was formally signed last by Bosch president and managing director Roland Odenwald, and TESDA director general Francis Salazar recently in Manila.

As part of the agreement, Bosch will provide the government agency with international standard training modules, which aim to enhance the local auto service industry through the proper education of its skilled workforce.

Skills training

To address the increasing need for more efficient transportation in the Philippines and Asia, Odenwald said that workshops "must be equipped with the proper equipment, service technology and most importantly, skilled personnel."

Through TESDA's network of some 120 schools and training institutions in the country, the program also provides access for private, industry and operators to receive the same curriculum course that are recognized in over 11,000 workshops in the South service network worldwide.

"This only will help (building) owners, be able to serve a wide variety of private and commercial vehicles," Odenwald said. "They will also benefit by gaining adequate knowledge, more competence, and therefore expand their livelihood opportunities."

The growing demand for more complex vehicle services is accelerated to advanced components and systems now found in some new cars.

Repair services

To date, the Philippine auto service sector has been the need for vehicle diagnosis and repair services that would match its increasingly complex vehicle systems.

Course on for offered under the Bosch-Tesda program are gasoline and diesel fuel injection technology as well as the calibration and repair of electronically controlled diesel injection pumps, which is exclusive to Bosch in the Philippines.

Bosch also now provides certificate courses at the Philippine Auto-Vocational Training Center (PVTTC) located at its service center in Katipunan St., San Antonio Village, Manila.

The courses offer practical training on both diesel and gasoline injections, vehicle electronics and electronics, and brake systems.

The facility is equipped with the latest in automotive diagnostic and repair tools to ensure that participants "are provided with an in-depth and thorough understanding, as well as skills and knowledge to perform quality service in step with the latest technology," according to Koh. He, the company's manager for automotive after-market service worldwide.

Special courses

He explained that diesel injection and gasoline injection training courses enable participants to understand the construction and operation principles, assembly, diagnosis and repair of gasoline and diesel injection systems.

The vehicle electronic and electronics training program, on the other hand, allows trainees to be acquainted with both measuring techniques and the different applications types of electronic systems, making them able to work on specific functions and effects of the various electronic systems.

Finally, the brake system course provides fundamental knowledge in the conventional and anti-lock braking system, and specialized diagnosis, testing and repair of the anti-lock braking system.

About 75 percent of the country's diesel vehicles run on Bosch fuel systems, while a significant majority also run on Bosch gasoline systems.

Trainees who graduate from courses at level of the PVTTC receive Bosch technician certificates after passing the required examination.

Top technicians

Since February 2004, the training center has produced certified and skilled Bosch system technicians and Bosch diesel mechanics who are accredited under Bosch equipment maintenance standards.

Bosch ended fiscal 2005 as the company with the widest product coverage in the Philippines after market, including low a sustained sales level for the company's auto group.

The company's product offering consists of over 100 engine parts, pumps and 18 car product lines, in which it extends to the fields of sparkplugs, water bladders, and gasoline and diesel systems.

Other Bosch products include diagnostic systems, body electronics, braking systems and filters.

Steadfast stewardship for TOYM awardee and eTelecare GM in 2007

eTelecare Global Solutions, the world's most awarded call center company, moves in 2007 with strong award-winning performance, and seeks inspiration for future growth.

This Philippine growth company, led and headed by Benedict Hernandez, the first Philippine general manager of a call center company to be named among the distinguished The Outstanding Young Men (TOYM) of 2006, is TOYM's 40 years. Hernandez is only the sixth recipient of the honor the Business Leadership.

Reputable judges for the awards program lauded Hernandez's leadership of eTelecare, epitomizing Philippine call center company that now serves 54 countries, mostly given by US-based trade associations, publications and firms working on business trends. His Philippine citizenship was especially honored, such as the 2005 Employer of the Year award given to eTelecare by the Personnel Management Association of the Philippines.

Hernandez, a magna cum laude psychology graduate of UP and a 1986 Outstanding Graduate Student of the same university, has impressively already gained several "firsts" and "youngest" citations in his career. He was the youngest GM of a call center company when he joined eTelecare. Prior to eTelecare, he was youngest vice president of National Telephones at age 17, and youngest export rep and then manager at Intercom Communications at age 22. At 19, he was also youngest faculty member of the UP Psychology Department.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo with TOYM awardee Benedict Hernandez together with his family

One may think that Hernandez is to be in such distinction. But as things turned out, the prestigious citation by the Philippine Arroyo as The Outstanding Young Man for 2006, will come unexpectedly.

"My parent to lead one company to world class performance is never really linked by wanting to gain recognition or awards. It is driven by my passion to prove that Filipinos can be the best and the brightest at global knowledge workers. Nevertheless, awards such as TOYM are still powerful encouragement and confidence-building for individuals like myself," Hernandez notes.

It developed a company, meaning investing in employees. This is a commitment that is heartfelt and not in all aspects of the company operations. eTelecare invests in choosing the best talent, as providing them a clear mission and support to enable its employees to be the best in its industry.

eTelecare professionals are empowered to make vital company decisions. As a result, they own up to their actions and develop a good sense of corporate ownership. "At eTelecare, we build a culture where employees would say 'this is my company and I own make a difference,'" notes Hernandez.

In 2005, a difference to be took place in its corporate life. While most companies have avoided a Philippine month being bought by its overseas customers, eTelecare gave a difference story. It bought an American company, the American-based Phase 2 Solutions. eTelecare then grew from being a pure offshore service provider to one that offers a wider choice of onshore and offshore services.

Today the seven-year-old Philippine-based eTelecare grows over 10,000 employees and 12 call centers globally in more than 7,000 employees, spread over four different centers (Manila, Lila, Alabang and Cebu) in the Philippines continues to grow at a rapid pace.

With its unique corporate culture, eTelecare Global Solutions delivers a brand of service for its clients that includes Fortune 500 companies. eTelecare Global Solutions provide innovative customer care, technical support, sales, retail and chat solutions the market-leading companies to the telecommunication, high technology, financial services, travel, healthcare and other industries. It renders value to its clients by focusing on quality performance invariably reducing clients' operational costs.

Powered by event success and the increasing figures of local employment for the youth by the call center industry, Hernandez has strongly highly into the sphere of industry development while carrying eTelecare's banner.

Hernandez is founding member and the first elected chairman of the Cordell Center Association of the Philippines (C.A.P.) that gave to 10 member companies in 4 years. With C.A.P., the industry responds to challenges and sets up linkages with other sectors such as government and the academe to push forward the country's advantages as host of call center services.

Empowering over 10,000 trained center professionals, the industry was responsible for revenue of about US$100m in 2006 and helps growth in related sectors as real estate, food and retail.

For now, Hernandez believes that the key to continued growth both by eTelecare and the industry is steadfast stewardship.

"Despite its amazing growth and success reaped by our industry, the work has really just begun. We need to continue this task of taking the industry to its fullest potential. The focus of our collective effort are not only to be joined by the hundreds of thousands of jobs or billions of dollars in revenue, we will succeed. By pursuing global excellence, we therefore help drive up national pride and confidence in ourselves being Filipinos," declares Hernandez.

Man

In a time when 100 million more heard of you without ever meeting you, you're the outstanding one who proved that the Filipino is worth it.

Who would have dreamed you could be better than the American? Not you, Ben!

In a time when the country looked for an ideal team to establish a world-class service center for leading multinational companies, you were the prime choice. So you showed, beyond to no one, worldwide.

For your pioneering spirit too, at eTelecare, salute you.

You have not only made our organization a leading company but also paved the way for the call center industry to make a significant contribution to the Philippine economy and the Filipino people.

Congratulations for being chosen as one of the 2006 The Outstanding Young Men. Your business leadership is truly worthy of national recognition.

Onglepho show opens gallery

JAMES Onglepho's 20th exhibit will be the inaugural show of the new Asia Art Gallery in the 1st Mall of Asia on Jan. 26.

The show consists of land-scapes and flowers painted in oil, pastel and colored pencil. Onglepho is a Filipino artist whose paintings are influenced by the Chinese style. His works depict detailed observation of nature.

His landscapes and flowers derive from Chinese composition but rendered with the technique of Western painting, resulting in a more distinct style for which the gallery has been recognized in Philippines art.

The Asia Art Gallery has been named as the Shangri-La Plaza Mall since 1994. It has attracted collectors and enthusiasts.

"The local art circle has thrived since the 1990s, when the 1st Mall opened its doors to the public. It was the catalyst of many creative artists," says Onglepho.

Art galleries in the same area like helped artists to art appreciation, where more people learned to appreciate painting, to paved the way for art galleries to arise. More art galleries opened and the nearby green, lush, which helped informed and inspired their own gallery spaces."

Managing a gallery isn't easy, says the artist.

"You, yourself, must be ready and have to have an artistic business," he says. "There you'll have to realize that collecting is more important than selling."

"You cannot ensure if you can because finding good artworks can be difficult, especially when it's an old piece done by a master artist. Remember that the value of good artworks increases over time."

Onglepho says a 10 x 10 oil painting by Monet's in Europe had been sold around P30,000 but sold in the Philippines now for worth P1 million instead.

"It is not surprising that in the Philippines many art collectors must actually become gallery owners," Onglepho says. "They know the value of paintings and how to take care of their pieces of interest."

Promoting art scene

With the Philippine economy improving, the future of the local art scene is promising, says Onglepho, who shared this in "Pulse," December, 2006, the October edition.
